BUILDING FORMALLY ACCEPTED
ON MONDAY EVENING, DE-PARTMENTS MOVING IN

Without any elaborate ceremonies, the new court house of Crow Wing county was formally accepted from the general contractors, J. & W. A. Elliott of Minneapolis by the county board. Their contract price was $247,136. John Elliott of the firm was present, also Wm. T. Harris, architect, of the firm of Alden & Harris of St. Paul, as the transfer was made from contractor to county.

All members of the county board adjourned in the afternoon and went in a body to the new court house and inspected it from basement to roof. They were satisfied with their inspection, and at the evening session the transfer was made.

The new court house is a model building, beautifully designed and well built, a credit to Crow Wing county.

Contractors having the installation of furniture, vault fixtures, electric lighting, heating, etc., have not had their work formally accepted.

Moving on Tuesday

The one ton G. M. C. service truck of the state highway department was impressed in service and early Tuesday morning started moving departments from old to new quarters.

The first to go was the county highway engineer, Walter M. Murphy and assistants. They had a large amount of books, maps, desks, equipment, paving samples, etc. With them went the county surveyor, John W. Curo.

Mrs. Hartley Next

The next department to be switched from old to new court house was that of Mrs. Irma Camp Hartley, county superintendent of schools.

"I hate to leave the old place," said Mrs. Hartley. "Many pleasant recollections are entwined in the old building."

Ruthlessly men picked up old furniture and trundled it away. Some she will never see again. One piece was an old desk which Wilder Hartley had when he was a county official years ago. Mrs. Harriet Engsborg child welfare board secretary, will have quarters with Mrs. Hartley.

Moving County Auditor

Shortly after 10:30 a. m. the G. M. C. truck and helpers made inroads in the collection of books of the county auditor, C. W. Mahlum, and soon his department had been shifted to its new base. The girl stenographers picked up their effects and walked over to their new desks.

For one thing, it was cooler in the new location and the windows offered a grand view of the river.

Others Moving

Following the county auditor came the removal of the effects of County Treasurer S. R. Adair, Register of Deeds and Registrar of Titles A. G. Trommald, Clerk of Court W. A. M. Johnston, Judge of Probate J. T. Sanborn, Sheriff Claus A. Theorin.

Stillman Case Will be Resumed

New York, July 12—On the eve of the reopening of the Stillman divorce hearings at Poughkeepsie tomorrow, attorneys for Mrs. James Stillman today were searching for some of her witnesses who have dropped out of sight. Referee Gleason's ruling on admissibility of evidence made last night were considered a blow to Mrs. Stillman's case.

The referee's final ruling on nine points of the law brought up by Col. Wm. Rand, attorney for Stillman, was favorable to the banker on seven out of nine counts. Practically all the disputed evidence tending to show alleged misconduct of Mrs. Stillman with Fred Beauvais, the guide, was admitted and only that which bore on Guy Stillman's illegitimacy was barred.

HARDING URGES CONGRESS DELAY ACTION ON BONUS

SAYS THE OVERBURDEN OF THE TREASURY NOW MEANS POS-ITIVE DISASTER

URGES CONGRESS TO CONSIDER TARIFF AND TAX BILLS FOR WHICH IT WAS CALLED

(By United Press)

Highlights on Harding's Address

"Every obligation is to the disabled and dependent.

"Enactment of the compensation bill in the midst of struggle for readjustment and restoration would hinder every effort and greatly imperil the financial stability of our country.

"It is unthinkable to reduce our burdens while committing to our treasury additional obligations which range from three to five billion dollars.

"I pledge you a most conscientious drive to reduce government costs by many millions.

"It would be discouraging to those who are bending every energy to save millions to have congress add to the tax burdens at the very beginning."

Washington, July 12—A small bonus to ex-service men at this time would be a poor palliative to the millions who are faced with unemployment. President Harding declared today in asking the senate to delay action on the soldier bonus measure.

It is unthinkable that the administration could reduce tax burdens if the treasury is permitted to meet bonus obligations of from three to five billion, he said.

Harding declared he would be ashamed of the republic if it failed in its duty to those who fought to save it, but he warned that immediate action on the bill would be a menacing effort to expend billions in gratuities and imperil our capacity to discharge our first obligations to those we must not fail to aid. He recited the huge expenditures already made through the war risk insurance bureau for disabled soldiers and promised more at a more auspicious time.

Three things are essential for a return to normalcy, the president said:

- 1—Lower taxes.
- 2—Refund of the war debt.
- 3—Adjustment of foreign loans.

"The overburden of the treasury now means positive disaster in the years before us," President Harding warned.

He emphasized that congress should proceed on the tariff and tax bills for which the special session was called.

He read his message to the senate, leaving the White House for the capitol shortly after the cabinet meeting. Harding read his message deliberately finishing it at 2:20 to a burst of applause.

Senator Penrose, of Pennsylvania, chairman of the finance committee, moved recommitment of the bonus bill to that committee within two minutes of the conclusion of Harding's speech.

President Harding expressed "disappointment" that "so little" has been done toward reducing war time taxes.

ALLEGED PACKERS BORROWED TEN MILLION DOLLARS

AT ONLY 2 PER CENT FROM IL-LINOIS OFFICIALS—OFFICERS
CALLED TO TESTIFY

(By United Press)

Springfield, Ill., July 12—Two officials of the Chicago packing companies were summoned today to appear before the Sangamon county grand jury investigating alleged juggling of $12,000,000 in state funds.

Sheriff Masters went to Chicago to subpoena Fred W. Crowell, treasurer of Armour & Company, and L. A. Carlton, treasurer of Swift & Company.

Claims that these two companies were permitted to borrow $10,000,000 from the state on which only two per cent interest was received by the state treasurer are being probed by the grand jury.

The investigation which got under way yesterday may be used as a basis for civil suits against Governor Len Small, Lieut. Governor Fred Sterling and Auditor Andrew Russell, all of whom served terms as state treasurers, to recover $2,000,000. This is the amount which Attorney General Edward Brundage believes is due the state in interest money withheld from the state funds by the former treasurers.

In case evidence presented to the grand jury warrants, the former state treasurers may face criminal charges.

MEN'S DAY

(By United Press)

London, July 12—Violence continued in the north of Ireland early today despite the truce which became effective yesterday.

Sniping was under way in Belfast when the bells tolled the beginning of the armistice following two days of serious rioting and after nightfall the disorders increased.

With the dawn of "Orangemen's Day," the anniversary of the battle of Boyne, the snipers were augmented by several instances of mob violence.

The casualties in Belfast were unofficially placed at thirty killed and one hundred and ten injured. To these today were added the death of a 19-year-old Catholic boy shot by snipers, and injury to several civilians by hands of the mobs.

Gunmen attacked a procession of Orangemen. Police intervened and many rifle and revolver shots were exchanged. Firebugs who destroyed scores of homes, were still busy today.

WAR EXPENSES FOUR BILLIONS DURING YEAR

SEVENTY-FIVE PER CENT OF ALL
PUBLIC MONIES WAS FOR
PAST AND PRESENT

(By United Press)

Washington, July 12—War, past, present and future, cost the United States nearly four billion dollars in the fiscal year ended July 1, the treasury department records show.

Seventy-five cents on every dollar of taxes paid went into bills arising from war or preparation for war. Other nations are spending as great or greater percentage of their income for war. This explains why people are bringing pressure on the government to accept President Harding's invitation to a disarmament conference.

Taxes collected for the year total $5,115,928,000 while disbursements for war purposes amounted to $3,836,928,000 without taking into account millions paid out in pensions by the pension bureau, by the war risk bureau and scores of other expenditures by departments which are not generally classified as war conducted branches of the government.

District Attorney On Trial For At- tempted Extortion

(By United Press)

Boston, July 12—Jesse L. Lasky, Adolph Zuker and Walter E. Greene, prominent movie magnates, attended the "Brownie" Kennedy's famous grill and wine dinner in 1917 it was alleged today in the supreme court.

The testimony was given by James Levenson, attorney for the men named. He was called to the stand in the hearing on charges brought by Attorney General Allan against Nathan L. Tufts, district attorney for Middlesex county. Allan alleged that Tufts conspired with others to extort money by threats of indictments from those who attended the famous party.

Levenson declared that he himself was at the dinner which was given at the Mishowain home. He said there were twenty or twenty-five guests present and among them were twelve girls whom he said he had never seen before. He asserted he was at the party until between one and two A. M. and that when he left the movie magnates were with him.

Levenson testified that they were eating, drinking and dancing. He denied that he saw any of the guests leave the room with the girls.

ENGLISH AND FRENCH PREMIERS WILL BOTH ATTEND

BOTH GREAT BRITAIN AND FRANCE ACCEPT INVITATION TO PARTICIPATE

ITALY AND JAPAN WILL PROBAB-LY DO LIKEWISE AND SEND
BIG MEN

(By United Press)

London, July 12—France today accepted President Harding's invitation to participate in a disarmament conference.

The foreign office formally telegraphed Selden Whitehouse, American charge d'affairs, that the government "would be very happy to accept an invitation." No reservations were mentioned.

"The conference has a double aim—to envisage the Pacific question and to discuss disarmament," Premier Briand told the chamber of deputies today.

"There is no need to say that France accepts. She sees therein the possibility of an agreement regarding the Pacific in which France has great interest.

"We are glad to participate in the discussion which is designed to diminish the heavy cost of armament which is weighing down all peoples." The premier was loudly cheered and the deputies paid special homage to President Harding.

Lloyd George Will Attend Conference

London, July 12—President Harding's disarmament proposal and Premier Lloyd George's acceptance today overshadowed the Irish peace negotiations which are to open here on Thursday.

The belief is widespread that Lloyd George himself would attend the Washington conference with Arthur Balfour and Winston Churchill as his chief aides.

This rumor was settled by Paris reports that Premier Briand had informed that it is his intention of attending the meeting if he is still in power.

The Times Telegraph and Chronicle emphasized the possibility of two conferences being held—the first to consist of a preliminary meeting for the most interested powers to discuss the Pacific and Far East question; the second to take up disarmament.

Japan Expected to Accept

Washington, July 12—Japan is expected to accept or reject President Harding's invitation to participate in the disarmament conference.

France and Great Britain have accepted. Japan was the only one of the "Big Three" which had not made known its attitude.

Japan held the center of the stage. Word from Tokio was eagerly awaited in Washington.

Japan's reported reluctance was said to have been based on the inclusion of discussion of the Pacific and Far East questions in the conference.

Lloyd George Will Come to Washington

London, July 12—Premier Lloyd George will attend the Washington disarmament conference it was officially announced this evening.

Premier Briand has already informally announced his intention of participating personally in the conference, and with the precedent set by Lloyd George it was believed that Italy and Japan may officially be represented.

Conference Called for Armistice Day

Washington, July 12—The disarmament conference may be called to meet in Washington on November 11, the third anniversary of the signing of the armistice, it was indicated today on the highest authority.

WAR EXPENSES
FOUR BILLIONS
DURING YEARSEVENTY-FIVE PER CENT OF ALL
PUBLIC MONIES WAS FOR
PAST AND PRESENT

(By United Press)

Washington, July 12—War, past, present and future, cost the United States nearly four billion dollars in the fiscal year ended July 1, the treasury department records show.

Seventy-five cents on every dollar of taxes paid went into bills arising from war of preparation for war. Other nations are spending as great or greater percentage of their income for war. This explains why people are bringing pressure on the government to accept President Harding's invitation to a disarmament conference. Taxes collected for the year total $5,115,928,000 while disbursements for war purposes amounted to $3,836,928,000 without taking into account millions paid out in pensions by the pension bureau, by the war risk bureau and scores of other expenditures by departments which are not generally classified as war conducted branches of the government.

District Attorney On Trial For Attempted Extortion

(By United Press)

Boston, July 12—Jesse L. Lasky, Adolph Zuker and Walter E. Greene, prominent movie magnates, attended the "Brownie" Kennedy's famous grill and wine dinner in 1917 it was alleged today in the supreme court.

The testimony was given by James Levenson, attorney for the men named. He was called to the stand in the hearing on charges brought by Attorney General Allan against Nathan L. Tufts, district attorney for Middlesex county. Allan alleged that Tufts conspired with others to extort money by threats of indictments from those who attended the famous party.

Levenson declared that he himself was at the dinner which was given at the Mishowain home. He said there were twenty or twenty-five guests present and among them were twelve girls whom he said he had never seen before. He asserted he was at the party until between one and two A. M. and that when he left the movie magnates were with him.

Levenson testified that they were eating, drinking and dancing. He denied that he saw any of the guests leave the room with the girls.

ENGLISH AND FRENCH PREMIERS WILL BOTH ATTENDBOTH GREAT BRITAIN AND
FRANCE ACCEPT INVITATION TO PARTICIPATEITALY AND JAPAN WILL PROBAB-LY DO LIKEWISE AND SEND
BIG MEN

(By United Press)

London, July 12—France today accepted President Harding's invitation to participate in a disarmament conference.

The foreign office formally telegraphed Selden Whitehouse, American charge d'affaires, that the government "Would be very happy to accept an invitation." No reservations were mentioned.

"The conference has a double aim—to envisage the Pacific question and to discuss disarmament," Premier Briand told the chamber of deputies today.

"There is no need to say that France accepts. She sees therein the possibility of an agreement regarding the Pacific in which France has great interest.

"We are glad to participate in the discussion which is designed to diminish the heavy cost of armament which is weighing down all peoples."

The premier was loudly cheered and the deputies paid special homage to President Harding.

Lloyd George Will Attend Conference

London, July 12—President Harding's disarmament proposal and Premier Lloyd George's acceptance today overshadowed the Irish peace negotiations which are to open here on Thursday.

The belief is widespread that Lloyd George himself would attend the Washington conference with Arthur Balfour and Winston Churchill as his chief aids.

This rumor was settled by Paris reports that Premier Briand had informed that it is his intention of attending the meeting if he is still in power.

The Times Telegraph and Chronicle emphasized the possibility of two conferences being held—the first to consist of a preliminary meeting for the most interested powers to discuss the Pacific and Far East question; the second to take up disarmament.

Japan Expected to Accept

Washington, July 12—Japan is expected to accept or reject President Harding's invitation to participate in the disarmament conference.

France and Great Britain have accepted. Japan was the only one of the "Big Three" which had not made known its attitude.

Japan held the center of the stage. Word from Tokyo was eagerly awaited in Washington.

Japan's reported reluctance was said to have been based on the inclusion of discussion of the Pacific and Far East questions in the conference.

Lloyd George Will Come to Washington

London, July 12—Premier Lloyd George will attend the Washington disarmament conference it was officially announced this evening.

Premier Briand has already informally announced his intention of participating personally in the conference, and with the precedent set by Lloyd George it was believed that Italy and Japan may officially be represented.

Conference Called for Armistice Day

Washington, July 12—The disarmament conference may be called to meet in Washington on November 11, the third anniversary of the signing of the armistice, it was indicated today on the highest authority.

U. S. Not Up to British on the Golf Links

New York, July 12—American golf, which was made to look rather inferior in the British amateur championships, took a big jump when Jack Hutchinson won the British open.

Jack, being a naturalized American and an entry from this country brought the credit to the United States but it was really a victory of British golf.

When Hannes Kolehmainen, running under the colors of Finland, won the Marathon last summer at the Olympic games, it was considered almost as an American victory in this country. For the same reason the British may consider Hutchinson's achievement a British victory.

However, America officially gets the credit and a lot of glory because it is the first time an entry from the United States has ever won the British open title and only the second time in history that a player outside of the British Isle won the tournament.

Jack Hutchinson was born near the St. Andrews course. He caddied and played on the greens there and knew the place inch for inch. He has always said that some day he would win the title there because he knew the course so well. The victory for him therefore was doubly pleasing.

As a whole America fared badly in international golf. The big three of amateurs, Chick Evans, Bobby Jones and Francis Quimet, went out of the amateur championships. They did have bad luck from the draw which put them against other American players in the early rounds, but Cyril Tolley, the former champion and the favorite for the honors, had the same misfortune.

America had great hopes for Miss Alexa Sterling, in the woman's championship. She was known to have a hard opponent in Miss Cecil Leitch, the British champion and she did have bad luck in being drawn with the famous British player in the first round.

Winning one out of the three British classics is an accomplishment at that. Americans hardly could expect a British baseball team to come over and beat the winner of the world's series and for the same reason American golfers for years may not be able to have success with any consistency in the British golf championship.

Illinois Farmers Stick to Wool Pool

(By United Press)

Springfield, Ill., July 12—Illinois farmers are preparing for a huge wool pool this year, according to officials of the state agricultural association, who had charge of the pool last year.

One million and a half pounds of wool were pooled in the state last year. H. W. Mumford, director of the live stock marketing association, declares that future state wide co-operation in the marketing of wool was assured by the way farmers held together last year despite one of the fastest falling markets in many years.

Growers who pooled their wool in 1920 received from two to fifteen cents more a pound than farmers who disposed individually of their wool, according to the reports of farm bureau advisors. While unorganized farmers were selling their wool for from ten to sixteen cents a pound, the state pool was holding two-thirds of its stock for prices of from twenty-five to thirty-two cents a pound.

Orders for sacks so far this year are already far ahead of the total orders of last year, and two cars of wool have been received in Chicago from Hancock and LaSalle counties.

Illinois, although standing tenth in wool production, is one of the ten states that are organizing wool pools for 1921. These state pools are the forerunners of a national pool that will ensure a better price for all wool growers in the United States, according to farm bureau officials.

One hundred thousand pounds of the wool pooled in Illinois was sent to spinning mills last January for farmers who had ordered blankets, suits, overcoats and auto robes to be made of a portion of their sheep's wool.

Here's Marvelous Dinner Dish.

The great national dish of Korea is cooked. To make it, you plunge a large lump of ice into a bowl partly filled with steaming vermicelli of the endless variety. Over this you pour a portion of hot beef stew. The ice congeals the beef fat into little islands of grease, and you never know whether the portion dangling from the end of your chopsticks will be icy cold or burning hot. The vermicelli, which is very tough, is to be lifted to the mouth with the chopsticks. Keeping a firm hold on it with the lips and teeth, you slip the chopsticks down to lift again and take up the slack by sucking.

NEW FUNCTION FOR RAILROAD

Photographs of Scenic Views Are Now Employed to Please the Prospective Traveler.

Nowadays the railway man does something more than oil and repair locomotives, run trains, keep roadbeds in repair, and prepare time-tables. He also takes photographs.

This is because the modern railway man has come to broad understanding of his function. He is not merely a transformed bus driver. He is a merchant. He sells transportation, as a piano dealer sells pianos, and he desires to make his product attractive. The beautiful casing of a piano does not add to its musical qualities, but it makes the prospective purchaser pleased with it in advance and contented with it after he purchases it. A photograph does not transport a passenger or make his journey safe, but it pleases the prospective traveler and adds an element to his journey which makes it more valuable to him both in anticipation and in memory.

But the railway man is even more than a merchant. He is as truly as an officer of the government a social servant. Civilization is a product of travel. Whoever not only promotes travel but helps to give it significance is a leader in civilization. And this is what the railway man does.

It is in this capacity, not merely as a merchandiser of motion, but as an enlarger of the environment of men and teacher of what travel has to offer to men's minds and souls, that the railway man employs the camera.—From the Outlook.

Bananas Grow Pointing Upward.

A bunch of bananas, as displayed in a store is hung just opposite from the way it grows. Bananas grow with their free ends pointing upward. The herb on which the fruit grows has an underground stem which sends up suckers or sprouts that attain their full growth in a year and a half or two years. Its "trunk" is not really a trunk at all, but a false stalk formed by the curled bases of the leaves, which wrap themselves about the flower stem. This stalk, almost a foot in diameter at the bottom, rises to a height of from ten to forty feet. Its great leaves, a foot or two in width and from six to ten feet in length, drooping outward. When the plant has reached its full growth there appears a huge flower bud, which opens and shows a bunch of little purple flowers, each of which makes way for a tiny banana. The great flower cluster hangs toward the earth, but as the separate fruits begin to grow they turn upward. From 50 to 150 bananas, weighing altogether from 40 to 100 pounds, may grow in a bunch.

A bunch of bananas, as displayed in a store is hung just opposite from the way it grows. Bananas grow with their free ends pointing upward. The herb on which the fruit grows has an underground stem which sends up suckers or sprouts that attain their full growth in a year and a half or two years. Its "trunk" is not really a trunk at all, but a false stalk formed by the curled bases of the leaves, which wrap themselves about the flower stem. This stalk, almost a foot in diameter at the bottom, rises to a height of from ten to forty feet, its great leaves, a foot or two in width and from six to ten feet in length, drooping outward. When the plant has reached its full growth there appears a huge flower bud, which opens and shows a bunch of little purple flowers, each of which makes way for a tiny banana. The great flower cluster hangs toward the earth, but as the separate fruits begin to grow they turn upward. From 50 to 150 bananas, weighing altogether from 40 to 100 pounds, may grow in a bunch.

KNITTED BLOUSE AND DRESS HERE

Indications Are That Garments of This Type Will Be Autumn Favorites.

STRIKING COLORS ARE USED

Rich Yellows, Striped With Black or Blue—Attractive Tones of Lavender, Mauve, Violet and the Charming Blue-Green.

Among the special things that Paris has provided for summer wear are beautiful sweaters in artificial silk, silk and wool and in silk and metal. From a standpoint of fashion, observes a correspondent, woman will not accept the mannish sports sweater. The smart Parisienne wants something more dressy and more becoming. With her the sweater blouse is worn to take the place of a lingerie or silk blouse and is not intended to be removed as our sweaters are, consequently it is not nearly so much of a real sports garment.

A well known designer in Paris, who was at one time a premiere in one of the big dressmaking shops, has established herself as an authoritative creator of the best and most artistic in this type of sweater blouse. She has placed her models successfully with prominent dressmakers who are receiving a great many orders for them.

Some of the best of these models, just received from Paris, are all of the knitted blouse type.

We have had knitted blouses and knitted dresses for some time, but they, like everything else, are one of the things which fashion takes up casually and as casually lays aside, until some day one of these hitherto carelessly considered articles of dress suddenly becomes a decided craze, often lasting much longer than its most optimistic sponsors hoped for. There is every indication that the knitted blouse and the knitted dress and suit will be prominent for autumn, so that it is quite safe to stock one's wardrobe with them.

Tailored Suits in Small Gray Checks.

Although French women recently have shown an unusual amount of enthusiasm over certain types of tailored suits, their conception of a sport suit is quite different from that of the English woman or the American. The Parisienne likes the soft woolsens in bright shades and with considerable adornment.

In suits of knitted fabrics, any number of which are being made up, not only for immediate wear but for autumn and winter showing, the French eschew the conservative coat and skirt type, preferring those of the skirt and jumper or overblouse sort. Although little variety is seen in the cut, much of it is introduced in other and more unusual ways. For instance, if the form a band around the bottom of the skirt and on the ends of the scarf or necktie. Yellow also may be striped with a blue. Then there are beautiful tones of lavender, mauve and violet and a charming blue-green of the shade that one often sees in the woods in midsummer.

A novelty woolen material, for sport suits, which was among the new fabrics this spring will be even more popular as the season advances. The pattern resembles the surface of a waffle iron with its alternating one-quarter-inch squares of crumpled and plain material. It may be had in all the bright shades of the modern sport costume, as well as dark colors.

Silk With Metal and Wool.

Heavy silk sweaters recently imported by prominent American firms have wool used in combination with the silk in an altogether new way. I have in mind a model of this sort which is knitted of corn-colored silk. The wool takes the form of a vari-colored floral border around the neck, the short flowing sleeves and the bottom.

The lovely yellow and silver sweater blouse called Bouton d'Or shows much the same treatment in metal and silk, the silver bands being placed on the collar, around the sleeves and bottom and forming the belt. The metal is knitted in the front in a rather complicated way.

Reverting to the type of suit referred to previously as being one which has taken a tremendous hold on the public taste at the present time, it is interesting not only as a fashion but as illustrative of the continuously varying demand which gives rise to the mushroom success from time to time of quite obscure dressmakers and the equally sudden fall of others in the proportion that they are able to create a new type or popularize an old one at the crucial moment when that particular style happens, for some reason or another, to please the public to an unusual degree.

At the present time O'Rosen, the tailor, is a big competitor of the dressmaker. There is nothing striking about the suit which has been his greatest success. It consists of a straight skirt and a coat almost exactly like the oldtime riding-habit jacket with snug-fitting coat sleeves, small collar and long revers to the waistline where one button is placed in link form. The coat has a slight flare. To be absolutely what is demanded at the moment the suit must be of a lightweight iron gray checked material, the checks being so small that they are almost invisible.

Vest Blouse Comes Into Prominence. The popularity of the suit, of course, creates a like demand for blouses. This is always welcome news to the blouse makers, who, having the variable winds of fashion so seldom fill their sails during the last few years, are on the alert to take advantage of everything that will stimulate their business. Consequently they are bending all their energies toward creating pleasing models.

The great popularity of the tailored suit brings into unusual prominence the vest blouse. All of the smart shops now are specializing in these, and among the most chic of the recent models is the gilet blouse, the front of which is developed in soft pearl gray kid embroidered in blue. It has the back and sleeves of pearl gray georgette.

In almost every instance the gilet blouse has the back and sleeves of a contrasting material, usually of a sheerer fabric than that used for the front. Double-breasted vest blouses of the man's type have fronts of embroidered linen with sleeves and back of sheer organdie.

Madeleine et Madeleine have made some charming blouses of the gilet sort from white satin and embroidered them in copper and black.

Harold Tries Out a Love Test

By FREDERICK CLARKE

(© 1921, Western Newspaper Union.)

"It would take a wise girl to fool me," boasted Harold Mercer. "You have no idea how a fellow with money and position is beset with the traps and allurements of the coquette; and the average woman, in my experience, is a selfish, sordid creature."

"While I entirely disagree with you, and beg leave to remind you of your estimable sister, Lucy," retorted his friend, Dale Burton, "what is the especial cause of this outbreak at the present time, may I ask?"

"Just this," explained Harold. "We are going to summer for two weeks at Pleasant Lake. Lucy insists that we shall seek out her friend, a Miss Etta Morris. I've seen her portrait, and I am going to determine if there is one woman in the world who really cares for a man for himself alone."

"As how, now?" propounded Dale, dubiously.

"I have a simple plan. It is an old one, I will admit, but it results I am after. Nothing would please Lucy better than to have this Miss Morris for a sister-in-law. Nothing would give me more delight than to find a real, genuine-hearted girl who thought more of love than dollars. Without letting either of them know it, we will exchange identities. You shall be Harold Mercer, the gentleman of leisure, the heir to the Mercer fortune. I will become Dale Burton."

When the two young men arrived at Pleasant Lake next day, Dale Burton was the brother of Miss Morris' dearest friend. They were introduced.

Then with a few words that made Harold wince, as to her pleasure at meeting "the fiancé of her dearest friend," Miss Morris turned to welcome the pretended brother of Lucy Mercer.

"Well," yawned Harold, dismally, as he and his friend reached their hotel later, "you seem to have made a hit."

"Think so?" smiled Dale, coolly. "I must say she's a delightful piece of perfect femininity. Of course, though, she wishes to make dear Lucy's brother the guest of honor!"

"Humph!" growled Harold, and went to bed wretched and jealous, and deciding that he had stumbled into an unpleasant pit of his own making.

Every time after that, whenever he met Miss Morris, Harold felt like a man who had lost a precious treasure.

"Yes, I'm going home tomorrow," declared Harold, a week later. "I've made a fool of myself and missed the chance of my life. I think you had better back out of the dilemma, too, Dale," he advised, anxiously. "The girl has a beautiful confiding spirit, and may—may take a fancy to you."

"Nonsense!" jeered Dale. "It's just her natural thoughtfulness for Lucy's brother, don't you see?"

Harold was returning from a solitary tramp down a country road, when he ran across Dale rushing along in a great state of excitement.

"Say, Harold!" he burst forth, "here's work for the friends of Miss Morris. Somebody broke into the house this afternoon and stole all her jewelry!"

Harold said he met three rough looking strangers, one of them carrying a gun, an hour previous proceeding down a country road away from the village. He took up the trail.

Harold traced them to a campfire in the woods, surprised them and made a dash for a jewel case one of the thieves had dropped; next for the gun. "March—to the town!" ordered Harold, extending the weapon, and an hour later he had safely caged his captives.

He was solemn as an owl as he returned the jewelry to Miss Morris. Her gratitude and friendliness warmed up his heart little. She insisted that he was thoughtful, valiant, and had done her a grateful service. Then he spoke of going away, and her lovely face fell. He could not help it—reserve to the winds! He was a forlorn human being, and he told his love.

"But what about Lucy," she began, and was interrupted by a violent start on the part of her visitor. His eye had fallen on an album open on her writing desk. Its first picture showed—himself! The light fairly blazed across his bewildered mind.

"Then—then—" gasped Harold, "you know!"

"That you were really Lucy's brother?" questioned Etta, shyly. "Yes, from the first. From the very first, too," she continued, "I—"

She paused in faltering confusion. Harold Mercer had learned his lesson. No more doubt, duplicity or analysis now! He had found his fate, he was sure of it, and he kissed the sweet hands away from the blushing face as he told Etta so.

NEW THINGS IN NEEDLEWORK

Tapestry Embroidery Affords Winsome Decorations Similar to Those of Grandmother's Day.

Tapestry embroidery, the very same work our grandmothers did as girls, is one of the newest things in needlework. It is worked on the soft Aida canvas or on the coarse weave congress canvas, and is done with silk or wool yarn and a tapestry needle. If the work is to be done in cross stitch the Aida canvas is the better. For other tapestry stitches the congress is preferred.

Any fillet lace pattern may be done in tapestry as well as the many patterns designed for the work itself. Cross stitch is really the simplest method and the artistic effect depends only on having the "top" threads of the little X which fills every square mesh of the canvas run in the same direction.

Chairs may be upholstered with tapestry pieces, scarfs and pillows, runners and panels, and even dress trimming may be made on the tapestry net.

Jeweled Ornaments.

Jeweled ornaments catch up the draperies of dance frocks. Turquoise cabochon surrounded with brilliants or cameos are particularly fashionable for this purpose. The new corsets are designed to give an absolutely flat back, but are slightly higher over the bust and the sides curve inward a trifle. Black silk jersey corsets are extremely popular with Parisiennes now.

The Snappy French Sport Suit in a Combination of Black and White.

Suit is of brushed wool it is made up wrong side out, that is, with the brushed side on the inside of the garment and the plain side out. This gives the desired warmth for outdoor games in winter and also has a practical idea back of it. We all know the unpleasantness of having twigs and leaves as well as dust catch on the surface of a brushed wool garment.

Most interesting suits consisting of a skirt, high-necked overblouse with a smart matching tie and a little hat or cap, all knitted, are being shown by exclusive firms featuring sport clothing. These will be worn in the mountains this summer and will doubtless prove among the most popular suits for country wardrobes next winter.

Striking are the colors and color combinations seen in these. There are rich yellow striped with black, the stripes being placed so that they

TIRES

MANY of you car owners have learned that quantity production of itself doesn't put long and satisfactory service into a tire.

You find something more to your liking in the policy of the makers of Hartford Tires.

They think too much of the Hartford Tire reputation to produce a single tire beyond the limit of careful and painstaking workmanship. And more people daily appreciate the real economy in this method of tire-building.

We all know the unpleasantness of having twigs and leaves as well as dust catch on the surface of a brushed wool garment.

Most interesting suits consisting of a skirt, high-necked overblouse with a smart matching tie and a little hat or cap, all knitted, are being shown by exclusive firms featuring sport clothing. OPPOSITION TO TARIFF ON PETROLEUM

Voicing strong opposition to the portion of the proposed tariff bill imposing a duty of thirty-five cents a barrel on crude petroleum, and twenty-five cents a barrel on fuel oil, the American Gas association maintains that such a duty must further increase the cost of living by increasing the price of gas service to the consumer.

"Less than two years ago," said Oscar H. Fogg, secretary-manager of the association, "many gas companies who are members of the association were notified by the oil companies whose customers they had been for many years that assurance could not be given of a continued and dependable supply of gas oil, a petroleum distillate largely used in the manufacture of artificial gas. It was stated at the time that the depletion of the oil supply of the country was becoming so serious as to threaten exhaustion insofar as the grades of oil used in gas manufacture were concerned, and many gas companies experienced great difficulty and in some cases found it impossible to negotiate new contracts for gas oil even at the prohibitive and unprecedented prices that then prevailed.

"Now it appears that a temporary condition of overproduction together with what seems to be a temporary reduction in demand for gasoline and other petroleum products, has prompted an attempt to protect the market by placing a tariff on the importation of oil. The gas industry consumes annually about twenty-four million barrels of gas oil and such a tariff as that proposed would increase the price of this essential material and in turn would add to the living costs of thirty million people who depend upon gas manufactured in processes using oil."

Geo. Ade's Name on Bootlegger's List

(By United Press)

Chicago, July 12.—Once upon a time there was a famous writer who was born in a small town but went to the big city to make his fortune.

The famous writer wrote many funny lines about the big city slickers in the way they operated.

The man after shaking a funny pen on the crowded island, could stand it no more and visited the small burg from whence he came.

It was there he inhaled some alfalfa dust and got a grand thirst.

He came to the Windy City and walked down the breezy boulevard.

He went in to a bootlegger who voted for prohibition who cast wicked eyes at him.

"How much is a case?" asked the famous writer.

"I sell it for 165 smackers a case to grocery clerks, but you have a great reputation so it will cost you just $170," answered the benefactor of the human race.

The famous man bought the odd case.

Moral: Being a grocery clerk is better than a great reputation when it comes to bottle joy.

Operatives of Roy J. Egan, assistant district attorney, were looking for Mr. and Mrs. James W. Walsh, alleged bootleggers delux.

Operatives charged they entered the judge's home here and sold contraband liquor to the shining lights of financial history and letters.

"On the list we confiscated was the name of George Ade, famous author of 'Fables in Slang.' We have information he was charged five dollars more a case because of his reputation."

ISLAND JOB IS SOUGHT BY TWO

GILBERT AND WALDO WILLING TO BE GOVERNOR GENERAL OF PHILIPPINES.

POSITION IS NO SINECURE

Man Who Holds It, Besides His Official Work, Must Entertain Many Visitors From All Parts of the World.

By EDWARD B. CLARK.

Washington.—Whoever it is that President Harding appoints as governor general of the Philippines will have a double duty on his hands after he gets there, that of doing his official work and that of acting as host for visitors of note from all parts of the world, including his own beloved country of America.

There are two men who are perfectly willing to go to the Philippines as governor general, and of course there are many more who are willing, but these two have been most prominently mentioned. One is Newton W. Gilbert, former representative in congress from Angola, Ind., and the other is Col. Rhinelander Waldo, formerly police commissioner of New York city, who formed what was known as the Harding Democratic league for the promotion of the election of the present President of the United States.

If Gen. Leonard Wood had desired the position of governor general of the Philippines, he could have had it, or at least it is generally so understood in Washington. The general, however, is now touring the Philippines and preparing a report on conditions there which he will turn in to the War department on his return. It will be used for the information, and guidance, perhaps, of the new governor general when he is appointed.

Traveling with General Wood and acting as his chief assistant is W. Cameron Forbes, who at one time was governor general of the Philippines. It is understood that Mr. Forbes, who has large business interests in the United States, is not a candidate for reappointment, but of course it is possible that if there is resistance on the part of the administration, he may change his mind and take the job.

Like Viceroy of India.

Now, in a way, the governor general of the Philippines has an official position like that which is held by the viceroy of India, for the chief official of the Philippines represents the President in the islands, although by no stretch of the imagination can he be called the vice president. The place which the governor general holds as the representative of the American government necessitates his doing an immense amount of entertaining, and the wife of the man who goes to the islands as governor general has her hands full, and her house full a good deal of the time, in her capacity of hostess.

In the old days of the Spanish rule the representative of the king of Spain had duties similar to those of the viceroy of India. He held what was almost a court in the islands, and the Filipinos came to regard the Spanish official as a little king by himself. When entertainments were given in Manila in those days, court etiquette prevailed, and it has been somewhat difficult for some of the Filipinos, in these days of the rule of democracy in the islands, to get over the old thoughts concerning the "court."

Must Entertain Many.

Congressional parties visit the Philippines almost every year. The governor general and his wife, if they want to continue in the islands and know which side their bread is buttered on, entertain the representatives as well as they know how. Representatives of the monarchies of the world frequently go to Manila on short sight-seeing visits. It is the duty of the governor general and his wife to entertain them. Moreover, it is their official duty to give on various occasions receptions for the chief Filipino officials, and then there are also certain public receptions which must be given.

The governor general of the Philippines, like the viceroy of India, has two residences. He must have them if he wants to keep his health. The chief residence is in the city of Manila, while the other is at the end of the Benguet road, which leads up into the mountains. The governor general's household goes to the mountains in the extremely hot weather.

This Benguet road, by the way, has a history. Its construction was a difficult engineering problem. An infantry officer of the army, Maj. L. W. V. Kennon, was detailed for the engineering work. The men inhabitants of a province which he had governed volunteered to go to the scene of operations to work for the man they liked. They did it, and the road was completed on time. Major Kennon during the great war was a brigadier general, and in the absence of Major General Barry was in command at Camp Grant, Ill. He died only recently.

Local people have recently seen this picture in the cities and say "Fatty" looks very natural. No doubt crowds will turn out to see him "act."

Their premium giving creates a good deal of interest and the premiums are well worth winning.

Vaudeville Thursday at the New Park

This week will close the vaudeville season in Brainerd and from the looks of the bill it will close with a bang, as the acts this week look 100 per cent, consisting of a high wire acrobatic and tumbling act, a juggling number, a specialty and a song and dance number. But Many Decades Ago the "Antimacassar" Was a Part of Every Well-Regulated Home.

Did you ever come across the word "antimacassar?" If you are from New England you surely have met it, for New England is its home. The word means "an ornamental covering thrown over chairs, sofas, etc., to prevent their being soiled by the hair." Its derivation dates back to the romance of the days when American clipper ships ranged all over the seven seas and their bywaters.

The hardy skippers of those days used to bring home a substance produced on the island of Celebes, in the eastern archipelago, named macassar oil, from the place where it was obtained. There was a belief in those days that this oil tended to retard or prevent baldness. So it was used in plentiful quantities by beaux and near-beaux.

But the oil worked havoc with the parts of chairs and sofas whereon the aforesaid beaux reposed their shaggy heads. So the New England housewives, as a preventive, devised the antimacassar (see the Latin "anti," against). Thrifty ladies, weren't they—and neat beyond cavil!—Chicago Journal.

Reports that the Buick five passenger 1920 model car stolen from the Imgrund Auto company by two men in soldier uniform, one a tall man and the other a short fellow, was mired in a swamp north of Crosby, led the sheriff, Claus A. Theorin and Imgrund Auto Co. people to Mission and Little Pine and thence to Crosby and near the Ida Mae mine they found a car which had been run into a swamp by accident. It belonged to Jack Severs, section foreman of the Soo line.

The tall and short men were last seen at Lum park when they boldly stole the Imgrund car. A night previously they had attempted to steal the car of Dr. J. A. Thabes. They were tracked from Brainerd to Crosby and then the trail was lost. The car had about seven gallons of gasoline and was running low on oil, so the pair would have to stop at some garage to replenish gasoline and oil. Paid $500,000 For Opium Permit

(By United Press)

Hankow, China—(By Mail)—Half a million dollars monthly tribute will be paid to the provincial authorities of Hunan province for a monopoly of the opium trade there, it was announced today, as a result of an auction conducted by the state government. Hsia Tou-ying, a former Tsuchun (military governor) of this province of Hupeh, made the winning bid.

Refusing to recognize the prohibition of opium trade provided in the criminal code of the Republic of China, the provincial authorities have taken advantage of the chaotic conditions existing throughout the nation to revive the drug trade to provide revenue for the maintenance of their local armies. Each province has its own army subject to the call of the Central government at Peking or the Southern government at Canton only when it suits the whim of the local party in power.

For a time it appeared that some progress was being made towards ending the growing of opium in China. But when it was learned that foreign interests had reaped immense fortunes from the disposal of the drug stocks on hand at the time of the "clean up," the natives rebelled against the new order of things and revived the industry.

Make Colonies Pay is Plan of Italian Duke

(By United Press)

Rome—(By Mail)—The Duke of the Abruzzi is again putting his personal services at the disposition of the crown in a serious effort to develop Italy's colony of Somaliland, down near the Red Sea.

He has already been there several months and Italy is now beginning to receive some of the fruits of his efforts.

Up to the present time, Italy's colonies have been much more of a liability to her than a dividend-paying asset. They consist principally of Tripoli and Cirenaica in the northern part of Africa and Erytria and Italian Somaliland in the eastern part. Some of them have ever reached a point of development to render them an important factor in Italy's economic life, as is the case with the colonies of nearly all the other European countries.

This situation Italy is now trying to remedy and the Duke of the Abruzzi's expedition into Somaliland is one of the first steps in that direction. He is putting into the task all of the scientific knowledge as well as patriotic zeal that characterized his polar voyages and his other undertakings on behalf of Italy.

He will remain in the Somaliland until October, when he expects to be able to render the government a complete record on the economic possibilities of the colony. One of his principal tasks is the supervising of the ties of the colony. Of his principal work already under way for rendering navigable the Nbel Sebeli river for its entire length. This will then serve as the means of transportation necessary for the material for putting large tracts of the colony under cultivation.

Huge quantities of agricultural machinery and other material have already reached Mogadiscio. This is being distributed over the colony as fast as means of transportation can be developed.

Aside from about sixty white workmen whom he has with him, the Duke of the Abruzzi is depending exclusively on indigenous labor for carrying out the various projects to place the territory under cultivation and render it an asset to Italy's national life.

Make Colonies Pay is Plan of Italian Duke

(By United Press)

Rome—(By Mail)—The Duke of the Abruzzi is again putting his personal services at the disposition of the crown in a serious effort to develop Italy's colony of Somaliland, down near the Red Sea.

He has already been there several months and Italy is now beginning to receive some of the fruits of his efforts.

Up to the present time, Italy's colonies have been much more of a liability to her than a dividend-paying asset. They consist principally of Tripoli and Cirenaica in the northern part of Africa and Erytra and Italian Somaliland in the eastern part. None of them have ever reached a point of development to render them an important factor in Italy's economic life, as is the case with the colonies of nearly all the other European countries.

This situation Italy is now trying to remedy and the Duke of the Abruzzis expedition into Somaliland is one of the first steps in that direction. He is putting into the task all of the scientific knowledge as well as patriotic zeal that characterized his polar voyages and his other undertakings on behalf of Italy.

He will remain in the Somaliland until October, when he expects to be able to render the government a complete record on the economic possibilities of the colony. One of his principal tasks is the supervising of the ties of the colony. One of his principal tasks already under way for rendering navigable the Nbel Scheli river for its entire length. This will then serve as the means of transportation necessary for the material for putting large tracts of the colony under cultivation.

Huge quantities of agricultural machinery and other material have already reached Mogadiscio. This is being distributed over the colony as fast as means of transportation can be developed.

Aside from about sixty white workmen whom he has with him, the Duke of the Abruzzi is depending exclusively on indigenous labor for carrying out the various projects to place the territory under cultivation and render it an asset to Italy's national life.

Nepal, a Hermit Kingdom

Street Scene in Patan, Nepal.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

Nepal, in which is situated much of Mt. Everest, the world's highest pinnacle, which is now being attacked by an elaborately equipped British scientific expedition, is the true "hermit kingdom" of today. The government purposely keeps the roads which lead from India to Nepal in bad condition, and travelers are admitted to but one small valley, and then only for special reasons upon a difficultly obtained permit.

This kingdom which holds itself aloof from the world is a narrow strip of country about 100 miles wide and 500 miles long, extending for nearly a third of the distance between India and Tibet along the sky-piercing Himalayas. On the south it includes a very narrow strip of plains country, but predominantly it is a mountainous region. In fact, its possession of Mt. Everest and some of the other of the highest mountains in the world give it claim, in one sense at least, to be the most mountainous of countries.

The Nepalese are a fighting people, have an excellent army and organization, and are fond of show, both in military display and in their religious festivals. The latter are very numerous, and in fact seem to be interminable. The women take a prominent part in most of them.

Some of the semi-military pageants end in the massacre of hundreds of buffaloes. In one such ceremony, known as the blessing of the colors, the commander in chief dips his hands in a bowl of blood and clasps each banner in turn, thus imprinting on each the mark of bloody hands. The scene is somewhat revolting, but probably has its use in keeping up a martial spirit in the army.

Voluminous Dresses of Women.

The Nepalese women wear yards upon yards—sometimes as many as a hundred—of fine muslin plaited to form a huge fan-shaped bunch in front, the back being quite tight. When a lady of rank drives in her barouche she completely fills the carriage with her voluminous skirt of brilliant hue. Above the skirt a vivid little tight-fitting jacket, usually of velvet, is worn; the hair is dressed in a peculiar knot in front, above the forehead, and fastened to one side by an enormous gold plaque with a jeweled center. A heavy gold necklace and gold bangles complete her jewelry. Every imaginable shade is used—purple, pale blue, green, carmine, orange, white, yellow, turquoise, and deep red—and the effect is wonderful.

At the time of state ceremonies the streets are filled with processions of elephants in gorgeous trappings, horses and ponies, brilliant military uniforms, and the usual crowd of good-natured, pleasure-loving people, the whole against the background of the old temples and natural surroundings making a wonderful spectacle.

The journey into Nepal is not an easy one. At first there is a track through the forest, but as soon as the outer hills are reached the road loses itself in the bed of a stream, up which the bearers pick their way with difficulty over and among great boulders. The official road finally goes over the very rough track across the Chandra-giri pass and down the almost impassable road on the other side into the Nepal valley. The last portion of the descent is down a long staircase of roughly-placed blocks of stone, and it is marvelous how the laden men and ponies keep their footing on it.

In the Nepal Valley.

From the foot of the pass an excellent carriage road into the town of Khatmandu runs through the valley teeming with people, towns, palaces, temples, and innumerable shrines. There are miles of such good carriage roads within the valley, mostly constructed in Jung Bahadur's time, and carriages and pairs, and occasionally a four-in-hand are constantly used by the palace people.

In this valley, where the shrines alone are said to number more than 2,700, the buildings present an amazing diversity of form, derived from many sources—Egyptian, as shown in the typical form of the windows and doorways finely adapted to local traditions; Persian, Babylonian, Indian, Aryan, and even Nestorian in some of the designs.

The inhabitants of Nepal are collectively known as "Dwellers in the Hills," and are divided into innumerable castes. The Gurkhas are now the dominant race. Among the Gurkhas there are 21 castes and in addition to these, there are among the Newars, or conquered people, 41 castes and sub-castes.

The most striking buildings of Nepal's comparatively modern capital, Khatmandu, are, perhaps, those composing the Durbar palace, with its many quadrangles and pagoda-shaped roofs, full of chambers and courts with small communicating doors easily closed, which enable the inhabitants to defend themselves in case of political disturbances, which are not infrequent. Some of the windows are very fine and there are some striking bits of wood carving.

Patan, the Old Capital.

Patan was the old Newar capital, where Buddhism was the accepted religion of the country before the invasion of the Gurkhas. Although the largest town in Nepal, it is a quiet, sleepy place, much of it falling into ruins, but still most picturesque. It stands in the center of the beautiful valley, against a background of green mountains and snowy peaks—a network of narrow, twisting little streets packed full of shrines, temples, and pagodas, many of them deserted and falling into ruins, but still with exquisite bits of carving and wonderful doorways of all shapes and sizes and wonderful designs.

Many of Patan's buildings are decorated with sheets of embossed copper gilt, and everywhere the shrines are guarded by pairs of fearsome animals of enormous size. Carved stone pillars are surmounted by animals, birds, or fish modeled in metal; bells of all sizes are everywhere, and huge lotus thrones in bronze hold bronze Thunder-Bolts or Dorgis.

The art of the Nepalese, or, properly speaking, the Newars, is worthy of special consideration. It was the Newars who brought art to its highest state of perfection, and their influence has extended through these hills into Sikkim, Bhutan, and Tibet. Indian influence has penetrated from the south with the advance of Buddhism and has spread through the hills, along the Brahmaputra valley, to Lhasa, the capital of Tibet. On the other hand, Chinese influence is also strong and there has been intercourse with that country for many centuries.

Beautiful Wood Carving. Nepalese wood carving is extraordinarily beautiful and ornate. Every scrap of wood is carved in some manner; the struts upholding the eaves of shrines represent satyrs and dragons, while windows and doors are examples of the most elaborate and minute workmanship of every conceivable design. The verandas and overhanging balconies are highly ornamented and the work on some of the pillars is very bold and striking.

In weaving, the natives are deficient, the only cloth made being a coarse cotton of no artistic value. The feudal system, which has prevailed among these hills for many years, is in a measure responsible for much of the artistic work of the natives, for it enables a man to put his whole energy into his work. He has no care about food or housing; it is to his master's and his own advantage to produce the most artistic work possible.

Nepal maintains a well-drilled and efficient army of about 32,000 infantry and 2,500 artillery, with about 100 serviceable and 150 unserviceable guns. The Maharajah is not permitted to have any intercourse with Europeans, and should the British resident or any official have occasion to interview him it is always in the presence of some Nepalese official.

JAPAN WANTS TO BE UNDERSTOOD

SEEMINGLY IS TRYING ALSO TO GET THE VIEWPOINT OF THE UNITED STATES.

EMPLOYS AMERICAN ADVISER

Frederick Moore, Veteran Correspondent in the Far East, Has Been Made "Foreign Councillor to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs."

By EDWARD B. CLARK.

Washington.—The Japanese government recently, through its ambassador to the United States, Baron Shidehara, has issued statements explanatory of its attitude toward certain international problems in which the United States is interested. The Japanese seemingly have roused themselves to the knowledge that they do not understand thoroughly the viewpoint of the people of the United States concerning some of the problems which contain possible elements of trouble.

It is apparent that the recent statement concerning the Anglo-Japanese alliance and the attitude of the emperor's government toward the United States, and its intentions toward and in China, is intended to clear up some misunderstandings.

The Japanese authorities have just secured the services of an American, Frederick Moore of New York city, as one of their councillors in foreign affairs. In plain English, it is probable that Mr. Moore should be known as the American adviser of the Japanese government on matters pertaining to its relations with the United States. Mr. Moore has just entered upon his duties. Specifically his title is "foreign councillor to the ministry of foreign affairs." He will leave for Tokyo shortly.

By securing the services of an American, a man familiar through long association with affairs East and West, and, moreover, an American of unchallenged patriotism, the Japanese government seemingly believes it will be able to understand more clearly and thoroughly the viewpoint on matters pertaining to the Orient. In truth, it seems that the Japanese, unable always themselves to interpret the sentiment and feelings of Americans, have decided "to let an American tell them."

Moore's Interesting Career. Frederick Moore has had a more than merely interesting career. For a good many years he was correspondent of the Associated Press in China and in other parts of the Far East, serving for some time in Japan. While having served in many parts of the world, Moore has remained steadfastly an American. He knows his country's viewpoint and seemingly the Orient's viewpoint, and my fixed belief is, for I know Moore well, that he may be able in his new position to serve the ends of real statesmanship, which means, of course, the maintenance of good relations when the lack of an interpreter of the right spirit and intention might make for misunderstandings and, perhaps, for sharp trouble.

In 1909 Mr. Moore was in Constantinople as a newspaper correspondent. The young Turks took the city, and everybody who might be considered a noncombatant went under cover. Moore, however, believing it to be his duty to his newspaper and to his profession to be where things were moving, went to a post of dangerous duty in the streets, and while there was shot and badly wounded.

The Japanese government has not had an American adviser for some time. The post was held 36 years by Hugh W. Dennison, an American of New England whose efforts to maintain cordial relations and to guide Japan right in its dealings with the West were recognized by the American State department, and by the state departments of the world for that matter. The Japanese government has just appropriated the sum of $50,000 for the erection of a memorial to Dennison in the Vermont village in which he was born.

Japan May Be Sincere Now.

The recent statement of Baron Shidehara concerning the Anglo-Japanese alliance and the relations of the United States thereto is regarded here apparently as an attempt to clear up misunderstandings. Generally speaking, it is put into the list of frank documents.

Predictions sometimes meet with a sorry fate, but judging from recent happenings it seems safe to prophesy that before long the Japanese government definitely will take up some of the matters which have been productive of friction with the United States, and will make an attempt to dispose of them definitely. It must be the work of the American State department to determine the sincerity of the Japanese government. There are those who doubt it. It is superfluous, perhaps, to say this, because if there were no doubters the ambassador to the United States would not be at pains to write his "clearing-up" statements, nor seemingly would it be necessary to have an interpreter of the American viewpoint in the service in Tokyo.

DENIES AGE IS DESIRABLE

Here Is One Person, at Least, Who Enjoys Youth and Is Leth to Part With It.

Seekers for the elixir of life have commonly been subjected to public ridicule. This, however, merely proves that the majority of people dislike having their attention directed to their infirmities. Since Cleora wrote "De Senectute" we have repeated down the ages the pious untruth that old age is a proud and desirable state and that regrets for a lost youth are misplaced. It is not so, and in our hearts we know it. Youth is as much to be preferred to age as life to death, and if we possessed any means of preserving our youth we should use those means. Nor is there any absolute reason why a human life should not be continued at its full power indefinitely. We age, apparently, in the same manner as we pass from childhood to adult strength; the process of development is reversed. A great number of recent experiments suggest that the reversal may, in suitable instances, be delayed. It is true these are mostly experiments on animals and, for the most part, lack confirmation. Yet few who have had opportunities of following the trend of events doubt that a measure of success has been achieved. Nor should the fact that a particular old man or woman who has undergone some operation or treatment and afterward died, be allowed to weigh either for or against any scientific hypothesis. Those who are engaged on the most adventurous research which man has ever conceived deserve, if we will be honest with ourselves, our support and encouragement rather than our ridicule. —London Times.

In the Nepal Valley.

From the foot of the pass an excellent carriage road into the town of Khatmandu runs through the valley teeming with people, towns, palaces, temples, and innumerable shrines. There are miles of such good carriage roads within the valley, mostly constructed in Jung Bahadur's time, and carriages and pairs, and occasionally a four-in-hand are constantly used by the palace people.

In this valley, where the shrines alone are said to number more than 2,700, the buildings present an amazing diversity of form, derived from many sources—Egyptian, as shown in the typical form of the windows and doorways finely adapted to local traditions; Persian, Babylonian, Indo-Aryan, and even Nestorian in some of the designs.

The inhabitants of Nepal are collectively known as "Dwellers in the Hills," and are divided into innumerable castes. The Gurkhas are now the dominant race. Among the Gurkhas there are 21 castes and in addition to these, there are among the Newars, or conquered people, 41 castes and sub-castes.

The most striking buildings of Nepal's comparatively modern capital, Khatmandu, are, perhaps, those composing the Durbar palace, with its many quadrangles and pagoda-shaped roofs, full of chambers and courts with small communicating doors easily closed, which enable the inhabitants to defend themselves in case of political disturbances, which are not infrequent. Some of the windows are very fine and there are some striking bits of wood carving.

Patan, the Old Capital.

Patan was the old Newar capital, where Buddhism was the accepted religion of the country before the invasion of the Gurkhas. Although the largest town in Nepal, it is a quiet, sleepy place, much of it falling into ruins, but still most picturesque. It stands in the center of the beautiful valley, against a background of green mountains and snowy peaks—a network of narrow, twisting little streets packed full of shrines, temples, and pagodas, many of them deserted and falling into ruins, but still with exquisite bits of carving and wonderful doorways of all shapes and sizes and wonderful designs.

Many of Patan's buildings are decorated with sheets of embossed copper gilt, and everywhere the shrines are guarded by pairs of fearsome animals of enormous size. Carved stone pillars are surmounted by animals, birds, or fish modeled in metal; bells of all sizes are everywhere, and huge lotus thrones in bronze hold bronze Thunder-Bolts or Dorjies.

The art of the Nepalese, or, properly speaking, the Newars, is worthy of special consideration. It was the Newars who brought art to its highest state of perfection, and their influence has extended through these hills into Sikkim, Bhutan, and Tibet. Indian influence has penetrated from the south with the advance of Buddhism and has spread through the hills, along the Brahmaputra valley, to Lhasa, the capital of Tibet. On the other hand, Chinese influence is also strong and there has been intercourse with that country for many centuries.

Beautiful Wood Carving.

Nepalese wood carving is extraordinarily beautiful and ornate. Every scrap of wood is carved in some manner; the struts upholding the eaves of shrines represent satyrs and dragons, while windows and doors are examples of the most elaborate and minute workmanship of every conceivable design. The verandas and overhanging balconies are highly ornamented and the work on some of the pillars is very bold and striking.

In weaving the natives are deficient, the only cloth made being a coarse cotton of no artistic value. The feudal system, which has prevailed among these hills for many years, is in a measure responsible for much of the artistic work of the natives, for it enables a man to put his whole energy into his work. He has no care about food or housing; it is to his master's and his own advantage to produce the most artistic work possible.

Nepal maintains a well-drilled and efficient army of about 32,000 infantry and 2,500 artillery, with about 100 serviceable and 150 unserviceable guns. The Maharajah is not permitted to have any intercourse with Europeans, and should the British resident or any official have occasion to interview him it is always in the presence of some Nepalese official.

JAPAN WANTS TO BE UNDERSTOOD

SEEMINGLY IS TRYING ALSO TO GET THE VIEWPOINT OF THE UNITED STATES.

EMPLOYS AMERICAN ADVISER

Frederick Moore, Veteran Correspondent in the Far East, Has Been Made "Foreign Councillor to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs."

By EDWARD B. CLARK.

Washington.—The Japanese government recently, through its ambassador to the United States, Baron Shidehara, has issued statements explanatory of its attitude toward certain international problems in which the United States is interested. The Japanese seemingly have roused themselves to the knowledge that they do not understand thoroughly the viewpoint of the people of the United States concerning some of the problems which contain possible elements of trouble.

It is apparent that the recent statement concerning the Anglo-Japanese alliance and the attitude of the emperor's government toward the United States, and its intentions toward and in China, is intended to clear up some misunderstandings.

The Japanese authorities have just secured the services of an American, Frederick Moore of New York city, as one of their counsellors in foreign affairs. In plain English, it is probable that Mr. Moore should be known as the American adviser of the Japanese government on matters pertaining to its relations with the United States. Mr. Moore has just entered upon his duties. Specifically his title is "foreign councillor to the ministry of foreign affairs." He will leave for Tokyo shortly.

By securing the services of an American, a man familiar through long association with affairs East and West, and moreover, an American of unchallenged patriotism, the Japanese government seemingly believes it will be able to understand more clearly and thoroughly the viewpoint on matters pertaining to the Orient. In truth, it seems that the Japanese, unable always themselves to interpret the sentiment and feelings of Americans, have decided "to let an American tell them."

Moore's Interesting Career.

Frederick Moore has had a more than merely interesting career. For a good many years he was correspondent of the Associated Press in China and in other parts of the Far East, serving for some time in Japan. While having served in many parts of the world, Moore has remained steadfastly an American. He knows his country's viewpoint and seemingly the Orient's viewpoint, and my fixed belief is, for I know Moore well, that he may be able in his new position to serve the ends of real statesmanship, which means, of course, the maintenance of good relations with the lack of an interpreter of the right spirit and intention might make for misunderstandings and, perhaps, for sharp trouble.

In 1909 Mr. Moore was in Constantinople as a newspaper correspondent. The young Turks took the city, and everybody who might be considered a noncombatant went under cover. Moore, however, believing it to be his duty to his newspaper and to his profession to be where things were moving, went to a post of dangerous duty in the streets, and while there was shot and badly wounded.

The Japanese government has not had an American adviser for some time. The post was held 36 years by Hugh W. Dennison, an American of New England whose efforts to maintain cordial relations and to guide Japan right in its dealings with the West were recognized by the American State department, and by the state departments of the world for that matter. The Japanese government has just appropriated the sum of $50,000 for the erection of a memorial to Dennison in the Vermont village in which he was born.

Japan May Be Sincere Now.

The recent statement of Baron Shidehara concerning the Anglo-Japanese alliance and the relations of the United States thereto is regarded here apparently as an attempt to clear up misunderstandings. Generally speaking, it is put into the list of frank documents.

Predictions sometimes meet with a sorry fate, but judging from recent happenings it seems safe to prophesy that before long the Japanese government definitely will take up some of the matters which have been productive of friction with the United States, and will make an attempt to dispose of them definitely. It must be the work of the American State department to determine the sincerity of the Japanese government. There are those who doubt it. It is superfluous, perhaps, to say this, because if there were no doubters the ambassador of the Japanese government to the United States would not be at pains to write his "clearing-up" statements, nor seemingly would it be necessary to have an interpreter of the American viewpoint in the service in Tokyo.

Don't Prod Your Liver to Action

NR Overcomes Bilioussness, Constipation, Sick Headache, Quickly, No Gripping or Pain. Guaranteed.

The organs of digestion, the assimilation and elimination—the stomach, liver and bowels—are closely allied, and the proper action of any of these organs is largely dependent upon the correct functioning of all the others. "Wiping" your liver into action with calomel or forcing your bowels with irritating laxatives or strong cathartics is a great mistake. A better, safer plan is strengthening and toning the whole digestive and eliminative system with Nature's Remedy (NR Tablets), which not only brings immediate relief, but genuine and lasting benefit. It acts on the stomach, liver, bowels and kidneys; improves digestion and assimilation; overcomes biliousness, corrects constipation and quickly relieves sick headache. Get your system thoroughly cleansed and purified for once; stomach, liver and bowels working together in vigorous harmony, and you will not have to take medicine every day—just take one NR Tablet occasionally to keep your system in good condition and always feel your best. Remember it is easier and cheaper to keep well than it is to get well.

Get a 25c box and try it with the understanding that it must give you greater relief and benefit than any bowel or liver medicine you ever used or no pay. Nature's Remedy (NR Tablets) is sold, guaranteed and recommended by your druggist.
